Interieur de l'église Saint-Pierre, Cheticamp, on the Cabot Trail, Cape Breton, N.S.

We went on a day-long bus trip around the Cabot Trail, & stopped at this Acadian village - all French speaking (but they speak English as well). A very old settlement, & they have this enormous church.
They also make hook-rugs,
& we watched them at work.
This has been a lovely week at the Gaelic College, & now I will have a week here in Nova Scotia, entirely on my own. I wonder how I shall make out. There are hardly any buses, so I shall rent a car. It is very good to see more of Canada.
Love from Jane
